

Run of show | Chapters 1 to 2

0–2 min Agenda and attendance

2–10 min Private feedback pages

10–13 min Bakery starter

13+ min Read p. 18; model one term card

If arrival takes longer, protect the reading. Record each block's real stop.

Feedback: exact words

“Please read your own page privately.”

“The three content areas are purpose, connection to the marketing concept, and example.”

“If I missed something or wrote it incorrectly, bring me the specific evidence privately. We can review it together.”

Do not ask the room to vote on fairness or ask students to disclose scores.

Feedback: 3 and 4

3 = expected understanding of purpose, concept link, and example.

4 = core met, plus meaningful independent extension before prompting.

Follow-up questions may establish or clarify 3. A check for specificity does not erase extension already given.

Starter: bakery decisions

Say: “Before the first ad, what must this bakery decide?”

20 sec think.
One partner response.
Two voices from the room.

Then ask: “How would they know it worked?”

Reading, reveal, card

Read printed p. 18 before giving a finished definition.

Ask: “Which decision does the plan guide? Show me the line.”

Reveal marketing plan after students try. Model one card with term + source definition + meaningful image.

Official Teams file, submission route, and deadline: verify before announcing.

If the class needs help

If access fails: project p. 18 or use the approved backup source. Keep reading central.

If answers are vague: point to the first two paragraphs, then ask for one decision and one reason.

If ready: change one assumption, such as price. What would the bakery revisit?

Write each block's last page, heading, and card status before leaving.
